SECOND DAY IS ONE OF CONGRATULATIONS GREAT DRAWING ON LIKE CLOCK-WORK

First Excitement in the Deciding of Lucky Home-Seekers Is Somewhat Abated Around the Drawing Platform.

WEATHER FAVORS THE BOOMERS

Crowds Are Orderly and Take It Easy Beneath Clouded Sky While the Clerks Are Busy Working at the Machines.

NUMBER OF WICHITANS ON THE INCREASE

Texans and Kansans Are Only Ones Who Are Still Cheering at Good Luck of Their Respective States--Scene in Town at Night Presents Scattered Groups Whose One Topic of Conversation Is the Drawing and Each Man Waits Patiently for the Next Day's Results.

El Reno, O. T., July 30.—Promptly at 1 o'clock the work of drawing the names of lucky home-seekers was begun at the grounds. The day was a decided change from the previous one. All the morning the sun was obscured by heavy clouds which threatened rain at any time. The heat of the previous day was made a far away memory, by the pleasant conditions. People felt better and appeared more cheerful than on the previous day. The clerks, after a good night's rest were able to draw the names much faster and more than a thousand names of home-seekers were drawn from the boxes before the hour passed. Everything connected with the drawing went along as smoothly as clock work. It could not have been better arranged. As soon as the names were taken from the boxes, the clerks made official records and a list of the names of the fortunate were sent to different corners of the school grounds to be read. The crowds at the platform were not very large. The early hours of the morning although people began gathering around the platform before 7 o'clock. By eleven o'clock there were plenty of people. Many of them were of the opinion that the drawing was a fair show. When the names were read it was noticeable that whenever a Texan or a Kansan or a man from any state which had numerous representatives on the ground, a cheer went up regardless of whether the fortunate individual was known or not. If a man whose name had been taken from the box was in the crowd, he was promptly cheered to the front and made to show himself to the other home-seekers. He usually took the congratulations of friends and strangers with a broad smile on his face as though getting a claim in the promised land was next to being president of the United States.

One of the happiest men on the ground this morning was Deputy United States Marshal Hecke, who secured a claim in the El Reno district. By a friend he was among the fortunate persons, immediately started home to tell his wife of the good news.

The scene around the drawing platform reminds one of a country fair. There are tents and booths everywhere. People are camping out in wagons and live most any place in order to be near the drawing. These people are all waiting to hear whether they secure claims or not, and if their names do not come out there is sure to be many disappointed people who will turn their heads toward their former homes or try and secure lands in some other portion of the territory.

The platform for the drawing was cleared this morning with the exception of staff men for the newspapers and government clerks. A man who attempted to get near the drawing had to have some money and was told that he must stand away from the platform.

Last night people waited around the streets from the drawing. The scene of those who drew claims the first day. The man who was counting paper was surrounded by a crowd anxious to hear the names. A man who stepped up to a stranger and said: "Listen, let me see your paper. I want to see if my name is among the fortunate ones." And if a man found his name, a big bill went up that could be seen for blocks.

All night long it seemed that people walked along the streets and talked of the drawing. It was the feature of all conversations. Only one newspaper man up to noon today had secured a claim, and that is Dick Arnold, of the Kansas City Star, who registered in the Lawrence district.
